

You're in demand!

WHICH TOLERANCE TYPE ARE YOU?

THE ILIOS EXPERIMENT

Start!

You meet someone who has completely different views than you. What do you do?

I listen.

I insist on my opinion.

You notice that someone is being discriminated against. What do you do?

Someone makes a problematic joke. What do you do?

I step in.

I hold back.

You hear a heated discussion. How do you behave?

How do you deal with completely different opinions?

I address it.

I ignore it.

I stay out of it.

I try to mediate.

I look for common ground.

I listen, but I also share my opinion.

Someone expresses an intolerant opinion. How do you respond?

I try to make the person think.

I clearly say that it's not acceptable.

Someone makes inappropriate comments repeatedly. What do you do?

I calmly address it.

I distance myself.

Do you feel like you're often fighting against injustice?

Yes, always!

Yes, but only when necessary.

How should conflicts be handled?

Everyone has their own opinion, and that must be respected.

Finding solutions so everyone understands each other.

Why are you tolerant?

Because understanding is important.

Because boundaries must be clear.

What does tolerance mean to you?

Listening and understanding.

Fighting for justice.

Committed Defender

You fight for your values and do not tolerate injustice.
#Justice #Change

Harmonious Mediator

You promote solutions that everyone can accept and focus on understanding.
#Peace #Equality

Open Listener

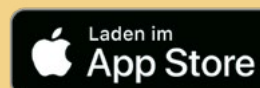

You are open, listen, and are willing to reconsider your opinion when good arguments are presented.
#Respect #Openness

Diplomatic Skeptic

You critically question, weigh things out, and defend your values when necessary.
#Criticism #Boundaries

Listening, mediating, speaking up – there are many ways to be tolerant. Every form of tolerance matters, because together we can create a society where everyone belongs – with different experiences, ways of life, and beliefs. Tolerance strengthens diversity and takes a clear stand against hate.
